A Career Guidance session on "Inputs to prepare for UPSC Civil Services examination " by Mr. Anjaneyulu an IAS officer – Jharkhand (UP), alumnus of 2005 CSE,dept for Civil Services aspirants of BE 3/4,4/4 CSE conducted on 26th ,Sept 2012.

Few facts we could acknowledge about the speaker during the session are as follows.

While a section of pessimist says "humanity is dying", there is a section of optimistic people like Mr.Anjaneyulu, who hold humanity. Born in poor household and yet nurturing high values and goals. He healed from a small Village Jammikunta set as an example that origin, money, caste etc cannot set us apart from achieving our goals if we are firm in our determination. He Has done his schooling in telugu medium, he became a Xth class

Mandal Topper, stood 6th in E-CET exams and did polytechnic from NIT Warangal and B.E in CSE from Vasavi College Of Engineering in 2005.

Being inspired from father to get involved deeply into society and welfare, resigned a well settled job in a firm and prepared for UPSC exam. In his third attempt he managed to cleared the exam and became an IAS officer serving as of now Jharkhand with his honest services.

The session started with a simple concept "Nothing Comes Easy". Anjaneyulu inspiring aspirants with his story of how a person from small place comes and achieves excellence. He had an excellent future in software industry but then he loses his father during his job and then moves ahead to fulfill his father's last wish.

While one side of society today says communication skills matter a lot, Anjaneyulu sets a perfect example communication skills are just mean to express views and then what takes us forward is the self confidence.

His journey to become IAS officer was off course not a cake walk, giving 3 attempts to clear the examinations. Succeeding in tough times, teaches us to be confident and plan safely whatever you do in future. He advices the young engineers to continue the job for few years, attain sustainability and do not be in a hurry to crack UPSC exams. After few years of Job, he advices the IAS aspirants to prepare sincerely for UPSC examinations. It is mandatory for one to be in pre-preparatory phase before going for first attempt. It is always better to have a coaching from any good training institute, but they only guide you about it and you cannot completely rely on them.

Do's and Don'ts

For civil service aspirant, it is mandatory to read newspaper every day, as said by Mr. Anjaneyulu "THE HINDU" can be considered as a bible for it. A coaching from a good caching institute is preferred but one should not completely reply on it. NCERT books from 5th to 12th class should be referred. It is smart work that pays off and not hard work, many aspirants study for 12-18 hours and still cannot clear the exam because they use their mind as storage-house and not a thinking machine. It is very important to observe previous year question papers and discriminate between the important and not important part. The nature of the questions is highly analytical, so one has to read and assimilate the essence to analytical reading, like editorials in news paper.

UPSC main exam consist of 1 main subject and 2 optional subjects. General studies is the main subject which has a blend of general knowledge, current issues, economy, foreign relations etc. the other two optional (Public Administration, Geography, Sociology etc) subjects should be chosen wisely and for every optional subject different coaching centre's are available.

A question session was opened by Mr. Anjaneyulu where many different questions were put forward to him and hence answered till the proper satisfaction of the students. He shared few moments of his UPSC interview and said one has to be confident for every answer he gives. Few questions regarding his favorite movie superstar Chiranjeevi and his political party was asked and decreasing female sex ratio was posed at him then he tells us a trick to answer this questions. Questions in regards to INDIAN policies were made and discuss the success and failure of the policies to justify the answer.

He concluded story of his where he uses his power for the welfare of the needy people. Being to down to earth personality, Anjaneyulu saw few blind children on the street of Jharkhand, and he immediately issued a order to help those children and get admitted into the nearest school for blind children in his district. Hence it's the satisfaction which is more valued in any job. Anjaneyulu actions and words, inspires us to always work for the betterment of the society.

The seminar was truly an inspiring and the audience must have gave a thought at least once after the seminar was over. what he/she is suppose to do now? How can I use my service for the society? And yes off course, is it money the only valued thing when it comes to earning? We have to start today to try harder, and in every way make a conscious and consistent effort to change subtle and deadly errors into constructive and rewarding actions, then success and excellence become a part of our life.

The teachings of him were not just useful for those UPSC examinations aspirants but also for every individual, as those are the lessons which can be implemented by anyone and in any part of his life.
